INSIDE STORY

SULC STUDENTS SUPPORT THE CHARGE TO HELP REFORM JUVENILE JUSTICE

LOUISIANA JUVENILE JUSTICE REFORM ACT IMPLEMENTATION COMMISSION

Operated by Southern University Law Center

Southern University Law Center's (SULC) Louis A. Berry Institute of Civil Rights and Justice has selected four Law Center students as to serve as interns to support the Louisiana Juvenile Justice Reform Act Implementation Commission (JJRAIC).

To build the JJRAIC's capacity, the Institute will assist in the development of strategic short- and long-term juvenile justice reform stabilization and sustainability planning; assist in securing and analyzing viable data that the JJRAIC can use to invest in resources that sustain juvenile justice best practices in Louisiana's various juvenile justice serving entities; and much more.

The internship provides an excellent opportunity for students to engage in public service and learn more about Louisiana's legislative process. It will allow students to take a proactive stance, leveraging legal expertise, rich educational resources, and strong community ties. During the duration of the two-year internship, students will assist with the development and implementation of evidence-based juvenile justice reform strategies, collect data and analysis, join community outreach activities, and much more.
